OPINION

My opinion as set forth below is based upon my academic studies, research, lecturing and publishing over the course of over thirteen years as a professor of law and Director of the Center for Terrorism Law, St. Mary's University School of Law; and lecturer at numerous academic and professional institutions around the world, to include the FBI Academy and other international law enforcement agencies. During the course of my professional career and academic research, I have obtained information from interviews with political leaders, fellow scholars, military officers, and captured terrorists, to include detainees at the U.S. Naval facility at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. In addition, I have reviewed numerous documents, periodicals, credible news reports, discussions with reliable journalists from CNN, ABC, NBC, CBS, BBC, FOX NEWS, Al-Jazeera, New York Times, Washington Post, etc., government publications, and scholarly works, as well as from my own observations and experiences living and visiting various countries in the Middle East including Egypt, Israel, and Kuwait.

In preparing this opinion, I have examined the complaint filed by the plaintiffs against the defendants in the case of Sokolow et al., v. Palestinian Authority et al.

I will demonstrate herein that the Fatah faction and the Palestinian Authority (PA), which were effectively indistinguishable from one another and both led by Yasser Arafat during the relevant time period, were responsible for the terror campaign known as the al-Aqsa Intifada, or second Intifada, that claimed both Israeli and American lives, among others during the period relevant to this case. In addition to the hundreds of innocent Israelis killed during this campaign, scores of innocent Americans lost their lives in this conflict. The PA was fully aware of the fact that, in its campaign of violence against Israelis, Americans were at risk of falling victim to these attacks. I will identify specific requests by the United States to the PA to stop the violence because American citizens were being killed. I further note that the American casualties continued to mount during the 2000-2004 time frame, even after the PA became aware of the danger to American citizens. The intifada continued unabated, and fueled by the Palestinian leadership.

PA/Fatah's Sponsorship and Incitement of Terror Attacks

In September 2000, after seven years of attempted peace-making with Israel, Palestinian Authority president, PLO Chairman and Fatah faction leader Yasser Arafat elected to turn his back on the Oslo Process, a diplomatic initiative that was designed to help the Palestinians and Israelis achieve peace in phases. The undisputed leader of the Palestinians elected to instead launch a low level war against the Israelis, now known as the al-Aqsa Intifada.

Palestinians, for their part, claim that the violence was sparked by the unwelcomed visit of Israeli politician (and future prime minister) Ariel Sharon, with a full security entourage, to the Temple Mount in Jerusalem-a site sacred to both Jews and Muslims-on September 20, 2000. The Palestinians insisted that that the former IDF general pushed the Palestinians to take up arms. This explanation for the uprising, however, was ultimately undermined by Imad Faluji, a member of the PA and minister of communications. Faluji was quoted as saying that the violence was "planned since [Arafat] the President returned from the recent talks at Camp David" when peace talks collapsed in July 2000.<sup>1</sup> More recently, Suha Arafat, Yasser's widow, admitted that Arafat had planned the intifada.<sup>2</sup> Nevertheless, even if one accepts the view that the "spark" was not orchestrated, it is clear that Arafat utilized the incident as an excuse to orchestrate his planned al-Aqsa Intifada.

Arafat launched the 2000 intifada when he realized that his stated policy of negotiating with Israel was not winning him Palestinian support. When Arafat moved from Tunisia to the West Bank after the signing of the Oslo Accords, he immediately imposed the PLO's authority over his people and the 30,000 man security force he maintained. He almost certainly realized that Hamas' popularity had been growing steadily since 1987 due to its image as a "resistance" group, reinforced by tough talk and attacks against Israel. This message resonated on the Palestinian street. All the while, Arafat, who attempted to gain legitimacy as the sole representative of the Palestinian people, watched his PLO and Fatah faction plummet in popularity. When forced to make a choice between peace and compromise or violence and rejectionism, Arafat chose war.

In his attempt to reclaim his lost status as the liberator of the Palestinian people, Arafat began to wield Islamist rhetoric similar to that of Hamas. He made Jerusalem, perhaps the lowest common denominator among Palestinians, a focal point of the violence. "We are marching, millions of martyrs to Jerusalem," chanted one frenzied crowd at an Arafat rally in December 2001.<sup>3</sup>

During the intifada, Arafat's Fatah faction through its Al-Aqsa Martyrs Brigades (AAMB) co-opted Islamic symbols and slogans. More importantly, however, by 2002, the AAMB had claimed responsibility for dozens of attacks in which Israeli and foreign civilians were killed. The group rivaled Hamas in its headline-grabbing attacks against civilian targets.

According to the U.S. Department of State, Fatah's AAMB "has killed a number of US citizens, the majority of them dual US-Israeli citizens, in its attacks."<sup>4</sup> Accordingly, the AAMB were designated as a foreign terrorist organization in 2002 by the U.S. Department of State after it was determined that the group "has committed, or poses a serious risk of committing, acts of terrorism that threaten the security of U.S. nationals or the national security, foreign policy, or economy of the United States."<sup>5</sup>

On March 21, 2002, for example, an AAMB suicide bomber detonated himself in the middle of a crowded street in Jerusalem, killing three and injuring 86. Less than three weeks earlier, another AAMB suicide bomber had killed ten and injured 50 at a bar mitzvah celebration.<sup>6</sup> The Brigades openly admitted their allegiance to Arafat. Indeed, one commander in

Documents seized from PA offices by the Israeli military during Operation Defensive Shield (2002) further demonstrated that Fatah, the dominant faction of the Palestinian Authority, bankrolled nearly every aspect of the AAMB's terrorist operations-from explosives to guns and gas money.<sup>8</sup> "The captured documents proved unequivocally that the Fatah organization and the AI Aqsa Martyrs Brigades are one and the same and they cannot be separated," an Israeli report stated.<sup>9</sup>

Following a review of the seized documents, Israeli authorities concluded that "Yasser Arafat was personally involved in the planning and execution of terror attacks. He encouraged them ideologically, authorized them financially and personally headed the Fatah AI Aqsa Brigades organization."<sup>10</sup> They further charged that Arafat had "gave terrorism 'free reign' (by releasing senior terrorists from prison and refrained from carrying out minimal counter-terrorist activity) and even encouraged terrorism (inciting the Palestinian population-the 'Shahid speeches', financing and fostering terrorists)." <sup>11</sup>

Arafat personally praised numerous attacks, including the 2001 Dolphinarium discotheque bombing in Tel Aviv, which killed a large number of Israeli youths. According to Arafat, the attack was a "heroic martyrdom operation." <sup>12</sup>

Additionally, Hamas officials, including Mahmoud al Zahar, have contended that it was Arafat himself who gave them to green light to carry out attacks against Israel during the second intifada. According to al Zahar, "Yasser Arafat ordered the Hamas movement to carry out a number of military actions in the heart of the Hebrew state, after he felt that the current negotiations with the occupation government had failed." <sup>13</sup>

From the start of the second intifada, the Palestinian leadership was also engaged in full-fledged incitement primarily against Israel, but in some cases, the United States. For example, soon after the launch of the uprising, PA-run television was broadcasting sermons calling for the murder of Jews and Americans. <sup>14</sup>

Throughout the conflict, there was no doubt as to who was in control and whether the leadership was aware of all the attacks. A Fatah Central Committee member in December 2000 told the PA-run Al Hayat Al Jadida that "the leadership of the PA remained the source of authority, and it alone was the factor capable of leading the operations of the Intifada throughout the homeland. I can say for certain that brother Abu-Ammar [Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat] is the ultimate authority for all operations, and whoever thinks otherwise, does not know what is going on..."<sup>15</sup>

In 2001, Sheikh Ikrima Sabri, the Mufti of Jerusalem who was on the Palestinian Authority payroll, praised suicide attacks.<sup>16</sup> PA television also promoted "jihad and martyrdom." In June 2001, one sermon broadcast by the station stated, "Blessings to whoever waged Jihad for the sake of Allah; blessings to whoever raided for the sake of Allah; blessings to whoever put a belt of explosives on his body or on his sons' and plunged into the midst of the Jews."<sup>17</sup> Another sermon on the PA-run station asserted, "We must educate our children on the love of Jihad for the sake of Allah and the love of fighting for the sake of Allah."<sup>18</sup> Yet another sermon broadcast

Americans Killed During Second Intifada

According to the Israel Security Agency (Shin Bet or Shabak), between September 29, 2000 and 2004, at least 1,028 innocent people died as a result of Palestinian terror attacks. An additional 5,760 innocent people were wounded during the same period.<sup>20</sup> From the start of the intifada, American citizens were among those killed and wounded. The following represents a partial list, verified and publicized by the United States Congress in House Concurrent Resolution 119, dated March 26, 2003:<sup>21</sup>

- On October 30, 2000, United States citizen Esh-Kodesh Gilmore, 25, was shot in Jerusalem;
- On December 31, 2000, Rabbi Binyamin Kahane, 34, and his wife, Talia Hertzlich Kahane, both formerly of New York City, were killed in a drive-by shooting near Ofra;
- On May 9, 2001, Jacob 'Koby' Mandell, 13, of Silver Spring, Maryland, was killed in an attack near Tekoa;
- On May 29, 2001, Sarah Blaustein, 53, of Lawrence, New York, was killed in a drive-by shooting near Efrat;

US Requests to End Violence and Congressional Legislation

These Palestinian terrorist attacks, which were often directed by Yasser Arafat and the PA leadership, continued to take place even after the first reports of American casualties. Indeed, at no point did the violence against civilian targets let up during the years 2000 to 2004. Rather, they increased in frequency and number. This indicates that the PA, as it continued to direct the violence, was not willing to cease its paramilitary campaign despite the mounting American casualties.

It was (and remains) common knowledge that tens of thousands of Israeli citizens are dual nationals who hold US citizenship (there are approximately 300,000 today).<sup>22</sup> American-Israelis are indistinguishable from the broader Israeli public. Moreover, Israel (and particularly Jerusalem) is an important international tourist destination with hundreds of thousands of visitors arriving each year to tour the biblical sites. Additionally, many thousands of foreign students, including American citizens, study abroad in Israel during the school year and summer recesses.

At any given time, there are thousands of foreigners, including many Americans, traveling in Israel. As such, the Palestinian terrorist groups surely knew that, by perpetrating terrorist attacks in public streets, on passenger buses, in cafes and on highways, there was a high probability that American citizens could be murdered and injured.

The notion that Palestinian terror groups or the Palestinian leadership that controlled them were unaware that American citizens were being wounded or killed is, bluntly speaking, impossible. In each terrorist attack, the international media publicized the death and injury of the American or Americans in question.

The US government made it clear from the beginning of the intifada that Americans were in danger. The State Department issued multiple travel warnings, including on December 7, 2001,<sup>23</sup> August 2, 2002,<sup>24</sup> January 10, 2003,<sup>25</sup> March 24, 2004,<sup>26</sup> August 3, 2004,<sup>27</sup> and November 26, 2004.<sup>28</sup> In other words, the U.S. State Department made it clear every few months that the dangers to American citizens remained high, as a result of the continued Palestinian violence. These warnings were obviously issued to Americans, but they were conveyed via State Department channels each time to the Palestinian Authority.

Congress also made it clear that it was concerned about the role the PA played in the violence, and consistently called upon the PA to halt the intifada immediately. Their concern was primarily focused on ending the violence, without specific regard for potential American casualties.

For example, on October 19, 2000, House Resolution 5500 called for the establishment of a body within the Justice Department to "monitor acts of international terrorism alleged to have been committed by Palestinian individuals or individuals acting on behalf of Palestinian organizations."<sup>29</sup>

House Concurrent Resolution 426, which passed on October 25, 2000, condemned "the Palestinian leadership for encouraging the violence and doing so little for so long to stop it, resulting in the senseless loss of life." In addition, it called on "the Palestinian leadership to refrain from any exhortations to public incitement."<sup>30</sup>

House Resolution 5522, introduced on October 19, 2000, warned that United States assistance (other than humanitarian assistance) may not be provided to the PA unless it could be certified that the PA leadership had 1) renounced violence and 2) undertaken efforts to end the violence.<sup>31</sup>

On March 15, 2001, House Resolution 1087 called for the cessation of US aid to projects in the West Bank and Gaza Strip until the Palestinian leadership renounced violence and the conflict with Israel subsided.<sup>32</sup>

States and Israel," calling it a "blatant attempt to incite violence against the United States and Israeli citizens."

Months later, three Americans were killed and one was wounded in the Gaza Strip when a bomb targeted a three-car U.S. diplomatic convoy.<sup>43</sup> This was the first clearly deliberate targeting of Americans since the conflict erupted. President George W. Bush lashed out at the Palestinian Authority, with specific frustration aimed at the lack of security sector "reforms that continue to be blocked by Yasser Arafat."<sup>44</sup> On November 6, 2003, House Resolution 3460 was introduced, calling on the US government "to prohibit assistance to be provided to the Palestinian Authority and the Palestinian people until the perpetrators, or suspected perpetrators, of the killings of United States citizens in Gaza on October 15, 2003, are surrendered to the United States Government."<sup>45</sup>

The culprits behind that attack were not found. As Assistant Secretary of State William Burns noted on December 10, 2003, "I want to speak plainly about the importance the United States attaches to investigating the murder of three of our diplomatic colleagues in Gaza last fall. We are still waiting for results in that investigation." He added that US assistance to the

Palestinians was halted, noting that "all the donors must have confidence that our personnel can carry out cooperation with the Palestinian people in reasonable safety."<sup>46</sup>

However, even with this warning, American casualties from Palestinian terrorist attacks continued to mount. In July 2004, Congress passed House Resolution 713, which noted that "more than 50 United States citizens have been killed and more than 80 United States citizens injured by Palestinian terrorists in Israel, the West Bank, and Gaza since 1993."<sup>47</sup> Many of those had come during the span of 2000-2004, a period known as the peak years of the al-Aqsa Intifada, when the Palestinian Authority was both carrying out and inciting violent attacks inside Israel.

CONCLUSION

In this report, I have demonstrated that the Fatah faction and the Palestinian Authority, both under the effective control of Yasser Arafat, were behind the terror campaign known as the al-Aqsa Intifada. This low-level war was responsible for the deaths of hundreds of innocent Israeli civilians and scores of Americans. If the PA was not aware of the initial American victims, it would become impossible to ignore that the casualty count was growing during the period 2000 to 2004. International news sources all covered the growing body count. In August 2003, the Washington Post estimated that about 900 victims had been killed. Amnesty International confirmed these figures through the end of 2003. This report has identified specific instances in which the State Department warned of Palestinian violence against Americans and instances in which Congress called upon the PA to cease its campaign of violence that claimed the lives of Americans. The fact that this violence continued uninterrupted, despite the repeated calls by the United States government to cease, clearly demonstrates that the Palestinian Authority was unconcerned with the loss of American lives, and ultimately led to the continued deaths of U.S. citizens.
